INDEX TO CIRCUIT COURT RECORDS: CLARK COUNTY, ARKANSAS --- 1819-1878

Thousands of names appear in this book, Index to Circuit Court Records, Clark County, Arkansas: 1819-1878. All individuals associated with activities of the circuit court are listed alphabetically in this comprehensive "every-name" index of Clark County Circuit Court records.

A major undertaking for the Clark County Historical Association, the Clark County Records Preservation Project includes the arrangement, description, and preservation of records once located in the basement area of the Clark County Court House. The goal of the project is to preserve and make accessible this part of Clark County history. One of the few counties in Arkansas not to have suffered a courthouse fire, Clark County possesses its entire set of county records. As one of Arkansas's five original counties, Clark County claims a lengthy heritage, but its history is necessarily incomplete without accessibility to all of its records. It is hoped that the set of indexes completed as a result of this project will provide that accessibility.

The records, some of which were created in the early 1800s, were stored in a somewhat haphazard fashion, due to space constraints within the courthouse. Additionally, the basement area presented a humid environment for long-term records storage. The records were transported to the Archives of the Clark County Historical Association located in Riley-Hickingbotham Library, Ouachita Baptist University. Here, staff and volunteers arranged the records for permanent storage, according to professional archival standards.

The project actually began with the physical transfer of the records to the Archives. The records were then cleaned as necessary. After a preliminary inventory, work began on preparing the documents for permanent storage. Approximately 225 cubic feet of documents have been flattened individually and placed in acid-free file folders. Indexing of every name in the records was completed by Special Collections staff and Historical Association volunteers.

As the indexing process got underway, it became apparent that individuals would appear in the index under various spellings. The records themselves actually contain a wide variety of spellings for surnames as well as first names. For example, "Gooden Deaton," "Goodin Deaton," and "Goodwin Deaton," are almost certainly the same person. These name variations can come from a number of sources: differences in spelling in the original records; differences in interpretation on the part of the indexer; errors in transcription on the part of the typist; failure to detect these errors during the proofreading process; or simply typographical errors. No spelling has been changed from the lists provided by indexers. Because of these reasons, researchers must check ALL possible spellings. With thousands of names, it is difficult for each and every one to be accurate.

This volume--Volume I--is the first in a series of five. The other volumes feature "Law and Order" (Criminal), beginning in the late 1870s; "Civil," beginning in the late 1870s; "Chancery," also beginning in the late 1870s; and "Loose Papers," which includes miscellaneous records of all types and time periods.
